According to Lenin, only those who recognise the class struggle and also the dictatorship of the proletariat are Marxists. Lenin inherited and developed the ideas of Marx and Engels on the dictatorship of the proletariat and pointed out the practical direction for breaking up the bourgeois state apparatus, establishing a socialist state and consolidating socialist power. Based on The State and Revolution, the inevitable victory of the dictatorship of the proletariat implies a threefold logical direction: from the theoretical logic, the dictatorship of the proletariat is an inevitable stage from the seizure of revolutionary victory to the realisation of the demise of the state; from the historical logic, the dictatorship of the proletariat is the inevitable result of the development of the proletarian revolution, and the dictatorship of the proletariat has a vigorous vitality; from the practical logic, the dictatorship of the proletariat is a powerful weapon for establishing and consolidating the Soviet regime. In terms of practical logic, the dictatorship of the proletariat is a powerful weapon for the establishment and consolidation of Soviet power, and adherence to the dictatorship of the proletariat has led to the catching up and surpassing of the development of the state construction of the Soviet regime, while deviation from the dictatorship of the proletariat has led to the fragmentation of the Soviet regime. It can be said that reinterpretation of State and Revolution and in-depth study of Lenin's idea of the dictatorship of the proletariat are of great significance to the consolidation of the CPC's political construction and the confidence in the victory of the world proletarian revolution, and that under the new situation, we should study Lenin's idea of the dictatorship of the proletariat in depth, scientifically master the use of Marxist class analysis methods, and vigorously develop the whole process of people's democracy.
